

International Studies-1

International Studies

Faculty: Sullivan, Director; Compte, Fisher, Gross, Landreau, Leven, Lowi, Mi, Potter, Winston, S. Wright

To meet the increased need for training in global perspectives, the interdisciplinary International Studies major educates students to appreciate the social, cultural, political, and economic characteristics of national, regional, and global communities. It is based on the conviction that historically informed and politically aware students with knowledge of more than one language will be able to think more critically and act more responsibly in a shrinking world. Students who successfully complete this major improve their opportunity for further study in graduate or professional school and careers in government service, private enterprise, international governmental and non-governmental organizations, non-profit education, research and advocacy organizations, and teaching.

Requirements for the Major

International studies majors take 12 courses: an introductory course; two courses each in the following four areas: economics/international business, history, modern languages, and political science; two related electives; and a capstone course. These requirements differ slightly for the concentration in international economics and trade which mandates two courses in economics/international business and one related elective.

Study abroad for at least one semester is required. The language courses must be at the 200 level or above and the history and political science courses must be at the 300 level or above. As part of the liberal learning requirements, it is recommended that students take microeconomics and statistics.

Each student will select one major concentration from among six. Concentrations are offered in four geographic areas: Europe, Latin America and the Caribbean, the Middle East, and East Asia, and two functional subjects: diplomacy, and international economics and trade. The related electives and the study abroad experience should be relevant to the concentration chosen. Students are also encouraged to pursue an internship with an international focus.

Major Requirements

Program Entrance, Retention, and Exit Standards

Every major program at the College has set standards for allowing students to remain in that program, to transfer within the College from one program to another, and to graduate from a program. The following are the standards for international studies:

- Retention in the program is based on the following performance standards in this “critical content course”: a grade of B– in 103-level language course.
- Transfer into the program from another program within the College is based upon the following performance standards in these “foundation courses”: a grade of B in the first 100-level language course taken.
- Graduation requires a GPA of 2.0 in courses for the program and earning a minimum grade of B– in 103-level language course.

General Information

Prerequisites for all courses except special courses and field experiences may be waived by permission of the instructor.

International Studies-11

International Studies Courses

INT 200/International Studies: Processes, Themes, and Issues 1 course unit
(fall semester)

Discussion of themes and problems in international studies using the insights of economics, international business, history, political science, language, and culture. Themes include social change, historical processes, globalization, ethnic and national identity, cultural interaction, and the role of values in social affairs. Required for all students majoring in international studies.

INT 250/International Study Tour (topic varies) 1 course unit

Combines on-campus classroom instruction with a conducted tour of economic, cultural, and political sites in selected countries or regions. Designed to provide an integrated, interdisciplinary, geographically focused experiential learning opportunity. Individual sections of the course will examine particular geographical areas e.g., Western Europe, Caribbean, Mexico.

INT 300/Human Rights in International Relations 1 course unit
(same as POL 345)
(spring semester)

Examines the evolution of human rights movements since World War II and their influence on the behavior of nation states and other transnational actors. Major topics considered include: the history of the contemporary human rights movement, realism and liberalism in international relations theory, human rights in American foreign policy, and the role of non-state actors in international affairs. Significant attention may also be given to non-U.S. perspectives, selected regional issues, and current topics such as: women's rights, terrorism, self-determination, globalization, forced labor, democratization, and humanitarian intervention.

INT 350/International Trade in the Caribbean 1 course unit
(occasionally)
(same as INB 350)

Prerequisite: ECO 101 or ECO 102

Examines trade relationships, flows, and structures in the context of historical experiences, contemporary political relationships, and economic imperatives. With a focus on the Caribbean region, the course also looks at how international trade processes actually work.

INT 352 History of the Caribbean 1 course unit
(same as HIS 364)
(fall semester)

Examines the history of the diverse people, communities, and nations of the Caribbean Basin. A mid-level course in the History Department and the foundational course for the Caribbean concentration.

International Studies-12

INT 365 African Cinema: Francophone African Experience Through Film

(same as AAS 365)

(spring semester)

Offers an in-depth exploration of Francophone African cinema by Africans in front of and behind the camera. Re-evaluates Africa through Western cinematic production and critically examines the now Africanized gaze, as Africans start to film themselves. Theories of colonialism and postcolonialism are incorporated through lectures and readings to give students an in-depth yet intelligible understanding of the history and cultures of Africa, while they are introduced to filmic techniques.

INT 370/470/Special Topics in International Studies

1 course unit

(occasionally)

Current or specialized topics. May be taken for credit more than once if content differs.

INT 390/Tutorial in International Studies

1 course unit

(occasionally)

Intensive study under close faculty supervision of a particular problem or topic in international studies. Requirements include intensive reading by the student and both oral and written reports. Emphasis is on the development of the student's depth of knowledge and understanding of scholarly issues through a close professional relationship between tutor and student.

INT 399/Internship in International Studies

variable course units

(every semester)

Prerequisites: Completion of internship proposal and approval of faculty supervisor

Supervised field experience in a public or private organization with an international focus; readings and an analytic paper place the experience in scholarly perspective. May be repeated for credit; no more than two course units may be counted toward the major.

INT 391/Independent Study in International Studies

variable course units

(every semester)

Prerequisites: Student proposal must be approved prior to registration by faculty member supervising the project

Independent reading or research pursued under supervision of a faculty adviser.

INT 495-496/Thesis in International Studies

1 or 2 course units

(every semester)

Prerequisite: Student proposal must be approved prior to registration by faculty member supervising the thesis

Students will design and complete an original paper of substantial length under the direction of a faculty adviser.

INT 410 Global Inequalities

(same as PHL 430 when the topics are "Global Inequalities" or "Just War and Humanitarian Intervention")

(spring semester)

Prerequisites: ECO335 or POL250 or POL380 or PHL350 or permission of the instructor

Provides advanced students in International Studies with a framework for integrating their previous courses in area studies, international political economy, development studies, and international ethics into a comprehensive understanding of one of the major challenges facing the international community in the 21st century, the eradication of extreme poverty.

International Studies-13

INT 498/Senior Seminar in International Studies

1 course unit

(spring semester)

Advanced study through individual research and formal seminar reports on broad topics in international studies. Topics chosen will prompt students to use the insights of economics/international business, history, political science, language, and culture to understand social change in local, regional, and global communities. Student research culminates in a substantial paper. Required as capstone course for all students majoring in international studies.
