

American Politics

POL 110/American Government

1 course unit

(every semester)

Examines the strengths and weaknesses, problems and promise of representative democracy in the United States. Surveys the relationships of citizens to Congress, the president and the courts through political parties, elections, interest groups, and the media. Considers the constitutional framework of government and the rights of the individual against governmental intrusion.

POL 200/Political Analysis

1 course unit

(every semester)

Surveys several major methods of political inquiry. Topics include research design, data analysis, statistics, and qualitative methods. Strengths and limitations of each approach are emphasized.

POL 207/Citizen Democracy

1 course unit

(occasionally)

Practical experience in, and study of, local political processes from the viewpoint of citizen activism. A project-driven course where students work with community organizations to research important issues of public policy, study the practical workings of real political processes, and evaluate the relationship of public officials to their constituents.

POL 215/Gender and Politics

1 course unit

(occasionally)

The role of gender in politics is examined in a lecture/discussion format. Topics include research on gender, differences and similarities in political socialization and electoral behavior, gender-related issues in public policy, the role of gender in the decision making of public officials, and the relationship between theories of gender and the actual practice of politics.

POL 300/Politics and Public Management

1 course unit

(fall)

An examination of the field of public administration focusing on the external and internal factors that shape the performance of public agencies, the interaction of public agencies and their leaders with the presidency, Congress and the courts, and the administrative skills public administrators need to manage a public organization.

POL 305/American Public Policy

1 course unit

(spring)

An examination of the policy-making process, the important domestic policies that have resulted, and the evaluation of these policies. The primary focus of the course will be on the substantive issues of contemporary public policy in such areas as the environment, health care, welfare, the economy, crime, and education.

POL 311/The Presidency and Congress

1 course unit

(spring)

Problems of the modern American presidency and of the U.S. Congress, with an emphasis upon interrelationships and consequences for the national policy-making process.

POL 315/Parties, Interest Groups, and the Media course unit

1

(alternate years)

An examination of the role of political parties, interest groups, and the media as intermediaries between citizens and formal governmental institutions. The course will focus on the role of parties, interest groups, and the media in leadership recruitment, issue formulation, and public policy making.

POL 316/Public Opinion, Voting, and Elections 1 course unit
(fall)

A study of the origins, content, and impact of citizen attitudes on the U.S. political system. Particular attention will be given to the impact of public opinion, along with other factors, on voting and elections.

POL 318/Politics of Community Change 1 course unit
(alternate years)

The political implications of the evolution of cities and suburbs. Includes the study of local politics, geography, demography, and economics applied to selected public policy issues such as redevelopment, sprawl, the environment, poverty, public safety, and education. The course includes instruction in Geographical Information Systems (GIS) and use of GIS skills in an analytical mapping project serving the needs of one or more community partners.

POL 320/Constitutional Law 1 course unit
(fall)

Examines the formulation and execution of American foreign policy in the context of American politics and of the United States' historic role in the world; some themes considered include the domestic sources of foreign policy and the conditions under which the United States uses force abroad.

POL 321/Civil Liberties 1 course unit
(spring)

An analysis of how the U.S. Supreme Court interprets the Constitution, focusing on the rights of the individual, including freedom of expression, freedom of religion, the right of privacy, due process of law, and equal protection of the laws.

POL 323/Law and Society 1 course unit
(spring)

An examination of what law is, the sources of law, and the impact of law on society and the individual. Examines internal aspects of the legal system, such as legal reasoning and the structure of the legal profession, as well as external factors such as the economic system and social structure, in order to illustrate the dynamic relationship between law and the society in which it exists.

POL 328/State and Local Government in New Jersey 1 course unit
(spring)

This course provides an analysis of the institutions, the political processes, and the resultant policies of state and local government in New Jersey. Particular attention is given to the structure of state, county, and local government, related political organizations, the nature of politics in New Jersey, and the impact of the state's cultural, economic, political, and social characteristics on political decision-making and public policy at the state and local level.

International Politics

POL 230/International Relations 1 course unit
(every semester)

An examination of contemporary patterns of international interaction and their historic roots with attention to competing theoretical perspectives. Topics studied include foreign policy, international law and organization, and international political economy.

POL 330/American Foreign Policy 1 course unit
(fall)

Examines the formulation and execution of American foreign policy in the context of American politics and of the United States' historic role in the world; some themes considered include the domestic sources of foreign policy and the conditions under which the United States uses force abroad.

POL 333/Vietnam and America 1 course unit
(occasionally)

Examines the origins and nature of the American role in the Vietnam conflict, 1946-1975, and the effects of that conflict on American politics, society, and foreign policy. Includes discussion of the relevance of the Vietnam War to more recent U.S. conflicts.

POL 335/International Organization 1 course unit
(fall)

Nature, structure, and functioning of international organizations, with a focus on the United Nations system, as a means to maintain international peace and security, and promote international and social cooperation.

POL 337/International Law 1 course unit
(spring)

International legal principles concerning international legal personality, jurisdiction over persons and places, diplomatic and consular relations, treaties, war, and relations at sea and in space.

POL 345/Human Rights in International Relations 1 course unit
(alternate years)

(same as INT 300)

Examines the evolution of human rights movements since World War II and their influence on the behavior of nation states and other transnational actors. Includes discussion of human rights in American foreign policy, and the role of non-state actors such as intergovernmental institutions, multinational corporations, and non-governmental organizations, selected regional and current topics such as: women's rights, terrorism, self-determination, globalization, and humanitarian intervention.

POL 355/ Political Economy of Natural Resources 1 course unit
(alternate years)

(same as INT 355)

This course is designed to give advanced undergraduates an introduction to scholarship on the politics of natural resources use. It combines theoretical material with study of a wide range of detailed cases -- cases that vary by the type of natural resource (minerals, water, forests), by the geographical (and to some degree, historical) setting, and by the level of analysis (local, national, and international). Though the course is focused on political questions, it draws on scholarship from economics, history, and geography.

POL 380/International Political Economy 1 course unit
(spring)

A study of the politics of international economic relations. Economic theories of international trade and finance are presented in the context of their political origins and implications. Includes review of primary analytical perspectives, historical developments, and major contemporary institutions and processes bearing on the politics of international economics

Comparative Politics

POL 150/Introduction to Comparative Politics 1 course unit
(spring)

The nature of politics and comparative analysis; examines various political systems-developed and developing, communist and non-communist-and criteria for evaluating them and their performance.

POL 250/Politics and Society in Developing Countries 1 course unit
(fall)

An introduction to politics and society in developing countries from an interdisciplinary perspective. Drawing upon history, anthropology, sociology, and political science, the first half of the course examines the historical development of developing countries and the challenges and constraints they face in becoming "modern," and in creating strong and coherent societies, economies, and policies. The second half is devoted to a more detailed examination of four central themes in social and political life in the developing world.

POL 350/Politics in Europe 1 course unit
(alternate years)

Examines government, politics, and society in the major European nations including but not necessarily limited to the United Kingdom, France, and the Federal Republic of Germany.

POL 352/Comparative Political Economy of Development 1 course unit
(occasionally)

An examination, within the framework of the comparative political economy of development literature, of a sample of developing countries and their efforts to develop economically and politically.

POL 353/Politics in East Asia 1 course unit
(occasionally)

Comparative study of political thought and institutions of East Asian countries emphasizing problems of modernization and interaction of economic, cultural, and social forces.

POL 357/Middle East Politics 1 course unit
(fall)

An examination of the politics of Middle Eastern and North African states from a comparative historical perspective. The principal focus is on the challenges and constraints that Middle Eastern societies have faced in their efforts to create modern nation-states. Topics include imperialist intervention in the region, post-Colonial state-building experiences, and the role of Islam in domestic politics.

POL 358/Latin-American Politics 1 course unit
(alternate years)

An examination of the contemporary political, economic, and social structures of Latin American countries within a historical and theoretical context. Particular emphasis on the causes and consequences of cycles of democratic and authoritarian rule.

POL 360/Politics in Russia 1 course unit
(occasionally)

Historical-physical foundation of the former Soviet system, Marxism-Leninism, the Communist Party, newly emerging formal institutions of government, elite and functional groups, problems of industrialization, and foreign policy.

Political Theory

POL 270/Western Political Philosophy 1 course unit
(spring)

Selected political questions that have intrigued Western society from time immemorial and theoretical solutions presented by some of the great political philosophers from classical Greece to the modern era.

POL 365/Origins of the U.S. Constitution 1 course unit
(same as HIS 365 when the topic is: Origins of the U.S. Constitution)
(fall and spring)

An examination of the political theories, people, social and economic forces, events, and political context that influenced the framing and ratification of the U.S. Constitution and Bill of Rights.

POL 372/History of American Political Ideas 1 course unit

(occasionally)

Follows the evolution of ideas of major American political theorists and politicians, concerning the individual, community, and world, to develop a framework for evaluating contemporary political thought and practice.

Special Courses

POL 370/Topics in Political Science 1 course unit

(occasionally)

Current or specialized topics proposed by faculty or students and approved by the department. May be taken for credit several times if content differs each time.

POL 390/Tutorial in Political Science 1 course unit

(every semester)

Prerequisite: Junior status

An intensive study under close faculty supervision of a particular topic or problem in political science through extensive reading by the student and the submission of both oral and written reports to the tutor. Emphasis on the development of the student's depth of knowledge and understanding of scholarly issues through a close professional relationship between tutor and student.

POL 391/Independent Study in Political Science variable course units

(every semester)

Prerequisite: Student proposals must be approved by the Political Science Department prior to registration

Independent reading or research pursued under supervision of a department advisor; project proposals may be presented by upper-level students who have completed two units of 300 and 400 level political science courses.

POL 399/Internship in Public Affairs 1 course unit

(every semester)

Prerequisite: Permission of intern supervisor

This course provides an opportunity for students to integrate theory with practical work experience in public affairs under the supervision of a field supervisor and a faculty coordinator. Work settings include but are not limited to the Governor's Office, legislative offices, state departments, lobbying firms, trade or union organizations, political campaigns and parties, and non-profit organizations. The College has cooperative arrangements with programs in Washington, D.C.

POL 401/Washington Semester Program 3 course units

fall/spring

(every semester) 2 course units summer

Prerequisites: 3.0 GPA, 3 course units completed in political science, sophomore or above

The Washington Semester Program affords students the opportunity to pursue internships, course work, and enrichment activities during a semester in the Washington, D.C. area. Programs are provided by the Washington Center and the Washington Internship Institute but the student earns

POL 495/Honors Thesis in Political Science 1 course unit

(every semester)

Prerequisite: Political Science major, Senior status,, completion of POL 390, with 3.5 overall GPA and 3.5 GPA in major

Research and writing of a senior thesis for students accepted into the departmental honors program. Application is made during the junior year. Oral presentation is made to an appropriate audience.

POL 498/Seminar in Political Science

1 course unit

(every semester)

Prerequisite: Senior status, POL 390

Advanced study through individual research and formal seminar reports on topics of special interest to seminar participants. May be repeated for credit.